Course Description:

In this course, we will study the theories, policies, and institutions of international trade and finance. The economic, political, and social forces underlying many of the issues involved in international economics are complex, multi-faceted, and dynamic. They cannot be fully or easily analyzed in a professional lifetime, much less a one-semester course. They do, however, lend themselves extremely well to critical thinking and rational inquiry, which are the guiding principles of this course. Our goal is to become and remain informed about issues related to international economics and, even more importantly, acquire the ability to think about complex issues in a logical objective manner. Thinking critically is what permits us to differentiate between the illogical and the sensible, between the misleading use of statistics, misleading anecdotal evidence, and the reasonable presentation of information.

We will use several different models to analyze the different topics covered. These models are based largely on diagrams and some mathematics. You will be given problem sets that will be instrumental in your preparation for exams. I will cover all necessary material to complete these problem sets and prepare for exams in class. The text is helpful in understanding many of the topics will cover, but it will not help you at all for other topics and you should not rely on it as your primary source of information. I will post some summary outlines on the course website, but these notes and the book are meant to complement what you learn in class – they are not substitutes for lecture materials! but also that you understand and remember the content. The prerequisites must be strictly enforced.

All students of the University of Colorado at Boulder are responsible for knowing and adhering to

Code of Behavior

Students and faculty each have responsibility for maintaining an appropriate learning environment. Students who fail to adhere to behavioral standards may be subject to discipline. Faculty have the professional responsibility to treat students with understanding, dignity and respect, to guide classroom discussion and to set reasonable limits on the manner in which students express opinions. See policies at <http://www.colorado.edu/policies/classbehavior.html> and at http://www.colorado.edu/studentaffairs/judicialaffairs/code.html#student_code

Policy on Sexual Harassment

The University of Colorado Policy on Sexual Harassment applies to all students, staff and faculty.

Sexual harassment is unwelcome sexual attention. It can involve intimidation, threats, coercion, or promises or create an environment that is hostile or offensive. Harassment may occur between members of the same or opposite gender and between any combination of members in the campus community: students, faculty, staff, and administrators. Harassment can occur anywhere on campus, including the classroom, the workplace, or a residence hall. Any student, staff or faculty member who believes s/he has been sexually harassed should contact the Office of Sexual Harassment (OSH) at 303-492-2127 or the Office of Judicial Affairs at 303-492-5550.

Information about the OSH and the campus resources available to assist individuals who believe they have been sexually harassed can be obtained at:
